Koh Hong (Room Island)

Is part of a group of islands one hour north of Krabi. Koh Hong has only one beach - Pelay Beach - but it is recognized for being extremely beautiful, boasting fine white sand, coral and lots of varieties of tropical fish. Pelay Beach is framed by limestone rock formations which give it an enclosed feel. Coupled with the fact that there are seldom many people there, Koh Hong very much offers a 'desert island' experience.

Talay Waek

One of Thailand's unseen highlights, Talay Waek is situated along Koh Dam Khwan. As the tide recedes, the sea is gradually separated by white sand and limestone beach that will appear to amazingly connect the two islands at low tide.

Koh Poda

Is a small limestone island 25 minutes by boat from the beaches of the Railay peninsular (which can be seen on the horizon in the photograph). The circular island is no more than a kilometre in diameter, covered in palm trees and almost entirely encircled by a soft white sand beach. A coral reef lies 20 metres offshore, and the combination of scenery, beach and excellent snorkelling make it one of my favourite places to spend a lazy day in this part of the world

Chicken Island

Is the nickname for Koh Kai, often written as Koh Gai and Koh Hua Khwan. Chicken Island got its name from the strange rock formation at one tip of the island that looks like the head and neck of an ostrich, chicken or a similar member of the fowl family. One end of the island consists of steep cliffs, while the other end has beautiful beaches along a peninsula. At high tide, this peninsula gets flooded, creating a small island. There is no accommodation on Chicken Island.

Phranang Cave Beach

The legend and mystery of Phranang Cave Beach goes back many centuries and the belief in the Princess Goddess still remains strong amongst local people. Phranang Cave Beach (Princess Cave as it is sometimes shown on maps) is a sacred place and should be treated with respect by anybody visiting there.

Railay Bay

The coast in the south of Thailand is a luxurious tropical paradise. Towering limestone cliffs shelter incredible beaches, the most beautiful is Railay Bay
